Cabot's Creosote Shingle Stains

WOOD PRESERVATION

Creosote is the best wood preservative known. Insects will not attack creosoted wood, which makes the stains especially valuable in Honolulu. Creosote stains are thin and are absorbed in the wood, permitting the ready evaporation of any moisture which may get into the shingles.

ARTISTIC EFFECT

The superiority of creosote stains over paint from an artistic point of view is apparent at once to all who have seen them.

DURABILITY and ECONOMY

Creosote stains are as durable as the best paint and are about fifty per cent cheaper. We have samples to show you and have all colors and shades of the stains.

J. MALONEY HAD A VERY NARROW ESCAPE

Walluku, Aug. 9.—J. Maloney, surveyor for the Pioneer Mill Company, Lahaina, met with a very painful and quite serious accident yesterday (Friday) morning. The accident occurred at Honolulu near the country home of R. C. Searle, manager of the Honolulu ranch. Mr. Maloney had just arrived at Honolulu on a mule and alighted and seated himself comfortably on the grass waiting for the arrival of Manager Barkhausen of the Pioneer Mill Company and others.

There being no hitching post near by and being somewhat weary after his long ride, he sat down to rest himself, and without dreaming of any serious consequences, he calmly tied the mule's rope to his leg. In the distance were a lot of cowboys driving cattle down and as they neared the place where Maloney was musing and admiring the natural beauties of Honolulu, with Molokai hills looming up in the west, the noise created by the cowboys made the mule think that he too was wanted to drive down the cattle, so without giving Maloney any warning, bolted on at a furious speed dragging Maloney along.

Mr. Searle's native boys saw the predicament Maloney was in, and with agility and great presence of mind seldom surpassed by cattlemen in other parts of the Territory, the mule was soon brought to a standstill and Maloney was removed to Mr. Searle's house where his wounds were dressed.

After careful examination, it was found that there were no bones broken, the injuries received being only skin bruises and these were not considered very serious. The distance the mule dragged Maloney is said to be about two or three hundred yards and the wonder is that Maloney escaped with the bruises that he had, for it would have been worse were it not for the timely arrival of the native cowboys.
